

I guess not a lot has changed but you might have seen my article in the Change page of the BMJ this year. That article I did identified another RCT (buried within what sounded like a cohort study by Schlessinger et al). Maybe the NICE team does not think that the additional evidence and article in the BMJ is sufficient to change any recommendations, but the least I could do is to bring these two new bits of information to your attention.

Best wishes